

I am here not to support XM's Instant Traffic and Weather, but support Sirius Satellite Radio's First Traffic. FM radio, once a fine media for entertainment and news, has become polluted with the sounds of annoying 20 minute blocks of commercials, obnoxious DJ's and big corporate agendas. Thankfully there is another option in the form of Sirius and XM. Both are fine services and each is an equally good choice to the other, that is not the point of this. The point is, if I want traffic on either service, its just two minutes away. If I want traffic reports on my FM station, I will likely have to sit through 10-20 minutes of pointless conversation and or commercials. Sirius and XM are far superior in the fact that their reports are on demand. I simply turn to the stream that broadcasts the traffic report and I'm finished. Services like XM and Sirius are going to make FM obsolete and rightfully so. They have lost their way and now are attempting to use the government to help prevent the mass exodus of listeners.
